The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was

2,704

Are You In It?

The Daily Times carries considerably more advertising than any other daily in Washington county. It gets higher rates for it, too, because The Times has the largest circulation. Is your advertisement in The Times? The Times originates, the others follow, excepting only when it comes to telling circulation daily to all. The Times circulation books, press room and all else open to your inspection.

Says the Randolph Herald and News, "Up to date, the Burlington Clipper has made but one journalistic convert to its lynching propaganda and that, we are sorry to note, is the usually sensible Groton Times."

The unusual sight of Italian troops in the great St. Peter's church at Rome, where the body of Pope Leo was lying in state, excited considerable comment. It may mean a long step towards a rapprochement between the church and the state. Heretofore it was considered that the Vatican guard was sufficient for all purposes in connection with the Vatican.

Theodore Roosevelt is not to be outdone by General Nelson A. Miles. Soon after the announcement that the latter had made a 90-mile ride on horseback in one day's time, came the news that our athletic President had made a 90-mile trip on horseback, starting in the dead of night, with a heavy rain falling, and in fact, having had no rest before beginning the journey. The honors are fairly with Roosevelt.

The definition of an "habitual drunkard" is not very clear in New Hampshire, as has been discovered in the hearing before the state license commission on charges preferred against a Lebanon licensee. The charge was made that the licensee was selling to habitual drunkards. Now the commissioners are groping about to find out what constitutes that class of persons. One lawyer advanced the following rather novel definition that "the habitual drunkard is the one whose sprees run together." On the other hand "the occasional drunkard is the man with an interregnum between his sprees." In other words a man might become intoxicated and be arrested as many times as he wanted to, so long as he allowed a brief respite between drunks, but if he persisted in running the drunks together with no interim he would be in danger of being termed an "habitual drunkard." Such an explanation would scarcely hold water with the usual court and it probably will not hold with the New Hampshire license commissioners.

Such enterprise as the little village of Jacksonville in this State is showing is worth emulating by the other towns of the State. A little over a month ago the village lost its principal industry, the mill of the North River Manufacturing company,

"Of course, clothes don't make the man, but during business hours they make all of him except his hands and face."—Lorimer.

If you fail to find what you want in our Ready-to-Wear Clothing, it's here in our Made-to-Order Department. We are not one-sided, and if you are we'll build the Coat so as to conceal the defect.

In a fire which swept away a large part of the village. Although the blow was most severe, the leading men have started a movement to repair the damage done. They plan to organize a stock company, rebuild the mill and run it. Already a major portion of the amount needed has been subscribed, and there is little doubt that the whole amount will be easily secured. With that secured Jacksonville's leading industry will be restored and even improved upon. The results of this energy are already to be seen in the promise of several new houses. If some other places in Vermont would show as commendable a spirit, there would be less of that sluggishness with which the State is charged. In addition, the Jacksonville incident is an excellent example for those who have no desire to place their money in home industries. The rest of the State wishes Jacksonville a good measure of success.

LEO'S APPEAL TO CHRIST.

Poem in Which Late Pontiff Regretted Evils of Past Ages.
 (By Pope Leo XIII., rendered into English by Andrew Lang.)

Renowned in letters, famed in art,
 The age recedes; of many a thing
 Won for man's good from nature's heart
 Who will may sing.

The glories of the faded years
 I rather, backward glancing, mourn—
 The deeds ill done, the wrongs, the tears
 Of the age outworn.

Red wars that reeked with the blood of man,
 Wide wandering license, acceptors rent,
 Pierce gulls that threaten the Vatican—
 These I lament.

Where is thy glory, stainless, free,
 City of cities, queenly Rome?
 Ages and nations kneeled to thee,
 The pontiff's home.

Wee for a time of godless laws!
 What faith, what loyalty abides?
 Torn from the shrine, the ancient cause
 To rule glides.

Listen! How science wildly raves
 Around the altars overthrown,
 Brute Nature, with the world for slaves,
 Is God alone!

Not made in God's own image now
 Is man—tis thus the wise dispute—
 But sprung from one same cell, they vow,
 Are man and brute.

O blinded pride on chaos hurled!
 O night proclaimed where light should be,
 Obey thou him who rules the world,
 Man, and be free!

Be only in the Truth, the Life;
 He only points the heavenward way:
 He only frees the soul from strife
 If men obey.

'Twas he who led the pious throng
 But new to Peter's dust divine;
 Of faith to live through ages long,
 No empty sign!

Jeaps, the Judge of years to be,
 Direct the idea, the tempest still
 And make the rebellious people free
 To work thy will.

See thou the seeds of happy peace;
 All evil drive from us afar
 And bid the rage and tumult cease
 Of hateful war.

The minds of kings and peoples mold;
 Thy word may all enjoy with awe.
 But there one Shepherd and one fold,
 One faith, one law.

My course is run; long ninety years
 Thy gifts are mine; thy grace retain;
 Let not thy servant's prayers and tears
 Be poured in vain.

ODD WAY TO STOP A TRAIN

Farmer Hung From Mail Crane to Signal an Express.

As the New York express on the Central New England railway was approaching the flag station at West Norfolk, near Winsted, Conn., the other day William Ahearn, the engineer, was surprised to see a man hanging to the mail crane in front of the little station, says the New York Tribune. His first thought was that the man had committed suicide and his second that the body would be badly torn when the mail catcher caught it. Quick as a flash he shut off steam and applied the air brake.

When the train came to a stop in front of the station the engineer was surprised to see the supposed dead man release his grip on the crane, jump to the ground and board the train. The individual, who came from a farm, but refused to divulge his name to inquisitive passengers, caused no end of laughter among the trainmen when he remarked that he hung to the mail crane by his hands so the engineer would see him and stop the train. A brakeman warned the farmer against repeating the performance, as he said the next time the mail catcher might catch him and dash his brains out on the side of the cars.

Leo XIII.—July 29, 1903.
 Our eyes may view the surging of the sea,
 Our ears may thrill with wailing of the wind—
 With wonder of the storms when shores are lined
 By wrecks of sunken bark—and fury's free,
 But who can view the force that bends the knee
 Of godlike man or hear the haughty mind
 Yield to the heart, and who has yet
 Loved's potent process which no man can see?
 Not through the stress of earthly might,
 But love,
 And not by power of arms or deadly strife,
 But stronger than the storms that rage and shout,
 O luminous, pale figure, high above
 The turmoil and the terror of our life,
 Thou hast, O Spirit, conquered even doubt!
 —Maurice Francis Egan in Washington Post.
